摘 要：

Social media outlets are becoming essential for academia nowadays, not just for the promotion of research but for research development as well. In this talk, we first provide an overview of the top picks for the social media newbies and argue that if used well, these platforms will allow academics to digest more content, more quickly, and more efficiently. We emphasize how to use social media in a way that enriches academic working life, but in a way that also provides added value. For this reason, Ashvale Technology provides the unprecedented platform for academic conferences based on the users experience. It helps researchers get more out of events by adopting an organized and systematic approach to professional events. Our products will also be demonstrated during the talk.
